How is a member's risk category defined?

Based upon a member's determinants of health, a predictive data engine sorts them into one of the following categories:

Well: The member is generally healthy and can utilize solutions that focus on wellness and maintaining their health.

At Risk: Data indicates that without intervention the member is at risk of worsening health and/or developing a chronic condition.

Chronic: The member has recorded diagnosis of a chronic health condition and may utilize condition-specific support programs.

Acute: The member has or develops a serious medical concern and/or is in immediate need of care and support.
